Only one shooter: Mayor Watson

It was "chaos" for Ottawa police officers on Wednesday as they rushed to the scene of a shooting. And although the RCMP did not say whether another gunman was at large, at least one city cop guarding a perimeter near the National War Memorial said there was still another suspect on the loose.

It would be hours later, in a scrum on Elgin Street with reporters that Mayor Jim Watson would allay those fears and say that there was only one shooter.

"My understanding is it is one shooter and that shooter is dead," he said.

Watson said once he got confirmation of this, the downtown lockdown had been lifted.

"We like to think of Canada and our nation's capital as a safe place and it is. And the footage that we saw — the soldier being given CPR on the steps of the War Monument and the gunshots in the Hall of Honour in Centre Block — is really surreal," Watson said. "I think any time something of this nature takes place it does change us ... We have to recognize, being a G8 capital, in a world that, unfortunately, has too many terrorists and sympathizers to causes that are opposite, we have to be more vigilant and careful."

Late Wednesday RCMP tweeted that Parliament Hill had been cleared of any security threat, but that the investigation is ongoing, meaning it would be off limits to the public.

Hill shooting 'caught us by surprise': RCMP

'Active operation.' Police, politicians short on answers

GREENWAY

RCMP in Ottawa say the gunman who fatally shot Canadian Forces member Cpl. Nathan Cirillo at the National War Memorial and then stormed into Parliament with a firearm "caught us by surprise."

Briefing media Wednesday afternoon when much of downtown was still under lockdown, RCMP and Ottawa police wouldn't confirm whether a second suspect was still on the loose. Later, the lockdown was later called off and the question of a second suspect was put to rest.

Meanwhile, on social media, residents were reporting that cops were still searching cars in the downtown core and checking vehicles crossing the city's bridges. Police dispatch radios were reporting suspicious vehicles on Ottawa highways.

"We are still investigating an active operation, we are in the process with the RCMP in clearing and securing Parliament Hill," said Ottawa Police Chief Charles Bordeleau. He confirmed no suspects were in custody.

"What we are asking the community is to continue to be aware, to be vigilant and to report any suspicious activity that they deem serious that could impact their safety."

Police confirmed they were investigating two separate shooting incidents — one at the National War Memorial where a soldier was killed and a second shootout at the Centre Block of Parliament, where a suspect was killed.

Police and RCMP wouldn't answer much Wednesday afternoon. At the time, the question of how many people were involved was still open, and no answers on that score were offered. Mayor Jim Watson confirmed later in the evening that there had been only one shooter.

RCMP Assistant Commissioner Gilles Michaud said once they were aware of the situation "all available and necessary resources" were deployed to Ottawa and he said they would stay as long as they were needed.

He said the RCMP had no warnings of Wednesday's Parliament Hill attack.

"It's our responsibility to protect the public, if we would have known that this was coming, then we would have been able to disrupt it," he said.

Two other people were also shot in the gunfight inside Parliament. Both were taken to hospital where they were listed in stable condition.

Police are asking witnesses to send photos or videos to Nat-Div_Media_DivNat@rcmp-grc.gc.ca.

Fallen soldier 'always wanted to serve his country'

Cpl. Nathan Cirillo.

Mourners came to pay their respects to the 24-year-old father killed while on duty in Ottawa

JESSICA

Cpl. Nathan Cirillo wanted to serve Canada in the military since his days at Sherwood Secondary School, when he wrote in his friends' yearbook that they would all go to Afghanistan together.

But that would never happen.

"He always wanted to serve his country," said his friend Jimmy Doan.

"At the time, that's where help was needed and he always wanted to be the person to help," said friend Alana Schneider.

After the news broke that Cirillo, 24, was the reservist shot and killed in Ottawa Wednesday, his high school friends went to the James Street Armoury in Hamilton, the home of the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders.

Mourners left flowers all afternoon and into the evening as reservists, who wore street clothes as they were warned not to wear their uniforms in public, filed in through the armoury gates.

Cirillo's friends remembered him as the class clown who always made everybody laugh. Cirillo has two sisters and parents in Hamilton whom he was very close to, his friends said.

Schneider's fondest memory of Cirillo was eating his army food under a tree near their school. He'd been bragging about it and then brought some for his friends to try.

"It was awful," she said.

He leaves behind a young son named Marcus. Cirillo met the boy's mother, Kendra, at the Ancaster Fair after Cirillo and Doan were escorted out for not paying their way in, recalled Doan. Kendra and a friend asked them for a ride home, he said. "And voilà."

Jason Melnyk, also a high school friend, said Cirillo worked at GoodLife Fitness and loved working out. He last saw him at the gym, where he was lifting 210 pounds.

"He made it look easy, which pissed me off," he said.

Schneider said he was always strong, and recalled Cirillo lifting her up over his head and throwing her into a lake back in high school, she said.

Ottawa went into siege mode Wednesday after a gunman rampaged into Parliament Hill's Centre Block shortly after he shot and killed a Canadian Forces reservist who was guarding the National War Memorial.

A high-ranking federal official confirmed Wednesday that the gunman killed in Wednesday's deadly shooting incident was Michael Zehaf-Bibeau, according to The Canadian Press.

Cpl. Nathan Cirillo has been identified as the soldier killed by Zehaf-Bibeau at the National War Memorial.

The Hamilton-based reservist was standing as the honour guard at the memorial when he was shot. He later succumbed to his injuries.

Quoted

"I looked out the window and saw a shooter — a man dressed all in black with a kerchief over his nose and mouth and something over his head as well — holding a rifle and shooting an honour guard in front of the cenotaph point-blank, twice."

Toby Zobl, a witness

On Wednesday night, police reinstated a lockdown in some areas of downtown Ottawa before later calling it off.

Police said there's no longer a threat to public safety in the downtown core. However, an investigation is ongoing on Parliament Hill. The Hill is closed to the public.

The RCMP are leading the investigation. More police presence is expected in the downtown area over the next few days.

According to witnesses, Cirillo was shot twice at "point-blank" range before the gunman ran toward Parliament's Centre Block. Several MPs said House of Commons Sergeant-at-Arms Kevin Vickers then fatally shot the gunman.

In a release issued Wednesday afternoon, police confirmed Zehaf-Bibeau had been killed. No other suspects are in custody, though police said others are being sought.

In a separate release, Ottawa Hospital said it had received three shooting victims from Wednesday's incident. Two are listed in stable condition.

Police refuted earlier reports of a separate shooting at the Rideau Centre mall.

Footage captured by a Globe and Mail reporter also shows police opening fire within the Hall of Honour.

Liberal Senate staffer Stuart Barnable told Metro he saw the whole shooting happen from his office on the East Block of Parliament.

"The guy pulled up outside the war memorial, jumped out of his car, got out with a rifle and shot at the guys who guard the war memorial. He hit one by the look of it. The other (soldier) booted it.

"(The shooter) ran back into his car, backed up Wellington (Street), and then swerved around and came up and jumped out and ran up towards the House of Commons. He had a long rifle."

Barnable said the man pulled the plates off a grey Toyota Corolla.

"He ran up the Hill and had a scarf covering his face. I ran down and told security to lock the doors."

Tony Zobl, 35, said he saw the soldier being shot from his office window above the war memorial.

"I looked out the window and saw a shooter — a man dressed all in black with a kerchief over his nose and mouth and something over his head as well — holding a rifle and shooting an honour guard in front of the cenotaph point-blank, twice," Zobl said.

"The honour guard dropped to the ground and the shooter kind of raised his arms in triumph."

Scott Walsh was working in a manhole near the East Block building when he said he heard gunshots. He then saw the ensuing panic and a gunman he said had long black hair and a face covered with a white scarf.

"He had a double-barrelled shotgun, he was about five feet from me and he ran right beside us, ran past the woman with the stroller and child."

The gunman then hijacked a car at gunpoint and drove it toward the Peace Tower.

The incident comes just two days after two Canadian soldiers were run over — and one of them killed — in Quebec by a man with jihadist sympathies.

Witnesses and those who have seen anything suspicious are urged to call 911, Crime Stoppers or Ottawa police directly at 613-236-1222, ext. 5493.

On the scene

Witnesses describe close calls with shooter

Barry Willis, a contractor for Bell Canada who was working in front of Parliament Hill at the time of the shooting, said he heard five or six gunshots and saw the shooter running by him carrying a large firearm, possibly a shotgun or rifle.

"He turned around, pointed the gun at me and I dove behind my truck," said Willis, who was still rattled by the incident after speaking to the RCMP. "Another young parliamentarian type of guy dove into my truck."

Willis described the gunman he saw as a "very young" man wearing a "blue-and-white headscarf" and a long coat.

"I'm shaken up. I'm ex-military and I've never had a gun pointed at me like that," said Willis as police ushered him and other bystanders to a safer area along Elgin Street across from the National War Memorial.

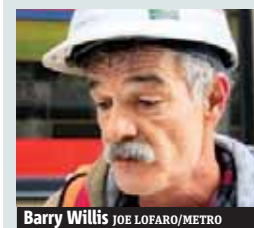

Alberta Labour Minister Ric McIver was on Wellington Street when he said he saw a gunman move on foot.

"I saw him go around the corner toward the Parliament Buildings," said McIver. "It was a little frightening and (I) worried about people's safety."

Jennifer Wiebe was on lockdown inside a Sparks Street office building. Police evacuated her and others about two hours later.

"It's certainly unnerving to know (because) Parliament is a very public place and (there are) lots of people," she said.

Alleged shooter's name linked to 2011 robbery in Vancouver

A man with the same name as the gunman in Wednesday's shooting in Ottawa had a criminal record in Vancouver.

The slain shooter has been identified as Michael Joseph Paul Zehaf Bibeau, born in 1982. A man with the same name and year of birth was charged in Vancouver in December 2011 with robbery.

Court records indicate he was seen by a psychiatrist while in jail and found fit for trial. The Vancouver police and the B.C. RCMP have confirmed they are working with the municipal police and Mounties in Ottawa. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Sergeant-at-arms hailed as a hero on Parliament Hill

Selfless action.

Longtime RCMP vet and head of House of Commons security led the sweep resulting in the shooter's death

Kevin Vickers, the decorated RCMP veteran credited with bringing down the Parliament Hill gunman, has always put community and country first, his brother said Wednesday.

The 58-year-old, now serving as House of Commons sergeant-at-arms, is believed to have led a team of officers into the Centre Block building and shot an armed intruder.

Across the country in Victoria, his brother John Vickers waited anxiously for word that his brother was all right. He'd seen raw footage of the dramatic shootout.

"It was just a tremendous sense of relief that he was OK," he said, adding he'd been in contact with family but hadn't spoken to his brother.

"The situation's still a bit fluid and because he's the guy still in charge of the security there, I don't need to be high on the conversation scale right now for him," John said Wednesday.

John said while the sergeant-at-arms may seem to be a symbolic position, what with the long gowns and the ceremonial sceptre he's often carrying, it's actually a role of great importance.

"He's the top gun there.... There's a lot of infrastructure there and I think he actually has 3,000 people there that he's in charge of," John said. "It's a huge responsibility."

John said his brother served with the Calgary RCMP in the 1990s and called the community of Scenic Acres home. He rose through the ranks and eventually moved to New Brunswick.

At age 58, Kevin was appointed director of security operations for the House of Commons in June 2005.

On Twitter, MPs credited Vickers with saving their lives.

"MPs and Hill staff owe their safety, even lives, to Sergeant-at-Arms Kevin Vickers who shot (the) attacker just outside the MPs' caucus rooms," tweeted New Democrat Craig Scott.

Veterans Affairs Minister Julian Fantino tweeted: "I am safe and profoundly grateful to Sgt-at-Arms Kevin Vickers and our security forces for (the) selfless act of keeping us safe.”

John, meanwhile, said his brother has always put service to the country first.

"It's never been about him.... He was called upon by the nation today to respond.... It doesn't surprise me that he answered the call on behalf of the nation and served us to the extent that he had to."

Downtown quiet as questions linger over deadly shooting

Uncertainty. Late into the night police continued investigation and residents worried whether it was over

LUCY SCHOLEY
lucy.scholey@metronews.ca

Ottawa's downtown was eerily quiet during rush hour Wednesday, following the shooting.

The killing of 24-year-old Nathan Cirillo and the Centre block fire that killed a gunman left the city in chaos, fear and at the end of the day, a lingering confusion.

I arrived about an hour after the 10 a.m. shootings and parked at the National Arts Centre. I stood by a crowd of journalists at Elgin and Slater streets. A cop told us to go home. He said cops were targets and therefore bystanders could be too.

It was tense. Some reporters were wondering whether they were putting their lives at stake just standing there.

Then there were the rumors to wade through, including one of a shooting at the Rideau Centre. Ottawa police later said that was untrue.

A crackling voice over another cop's radio reported shots at Metcalfe and Queen streets. And then Sparks Street. Cops widened the safety perimeter, telling reporters and bystanders, "It's for your own safety."

A few reporters snuck up on to the balcony of the National Arts Centre to try and get a better view of the police cruisers outside Chateau Laurier before being escorted back down by police.

That's when it started to quiet down. The odd siren still wailed, and there was the hum of at least one police airplane circling overhead.

Then at around 1 p.m., while we were standing near Chateau Laurier along Wellington and Sussex, four cops with their guns out ran from Chateau Laurier to the Westin Ottawa.

Reporters rushed over and parked their cameras at a distance. But then a cop brandishing an automatic rifle said the area was all clear. We relaxed.

Lockdowns were slowly lifted across buildings at the end of the workday. Dozens of people poured out of the U.S. Embassy at around 3:30 p.m.

The safety perimeter around the downtown area had been reduced, but the streets were far less busy at that hour. A long line of cars at Alexandra Bridge crawled out of the city past a heavy police presence. Cops had stopped checking every single vehicle crossing the bridges to Quebec.

There were no more sirens. Just glaring questions.

Students endure lockdown with Netflix

University of Ottawa students under lockdown following the Parliament Hill shooting. COURTESY EMILY CORDES

A student described to Metro a tense atmosphere in lockdown at the University of Ottawa.

Emily Cordes, 22, spoke to Metro from inside the university as shootings unfolded Wednesday.

Cordes said everyone was afraid. Some students were trying to keep the mood light, even watching shows on Netflix, but everyone was staying as silent as possible.

"All of the university and much of the city is locked down," said Cordes, who is studying communication with a minor in French as a second language.

"All students who were on campus at the time of lockdown were told to stay on campus in locked classrooms with lights off."

Asked about the mood at the university and the classroom where she was sitting at the time, Cordes said it was "quite varied."

"A lot of students in this room don't seem too concerned and are passing the time watching Netflix and chatting with each other."

"Others like myself are wanting to follow instructions and stay silent until we are told we can leave."

"Nonetheless, it's a very scary experience for all involved — even those who are taking it lightly."

She said her class had been due to take a mid-term Wednesday, but it was cancelled.

Cordes moved to Ottawa to study in 2011, but said she often returns to London. Her father, Steve, is executive director at Youth Opportunities Unlimited.

Cordes is a former student of Saunders Secondary School and W. Sherwood Fox Public School in London.

A short drive from downtown at Carleton University, Londoner Haley Ritchie, 21, was in class during the incident.

"It's pretty crazy," said the fourth-year journalism student, whose family still lives in London.

"I think most people are just absolutely shocked that this happened, especially in Ottawa. It's not normal here."

Harper cancels Malala citizenship ceremony

Prime Minister Stephen Harper's office says two scheduled events today in Toronto with Nobel Peace Prize winner Malala Yousafzai have been cancelled.

The last-minute announcement comes amid an ongoing emergency in Ottawa, where several shootings have occurred on or near Parliament Hill.

Harper was to moderate an afternoon question-and-answer session with Yousafzai at a Toronto high school.

He was then scheduled to head to a downtown hotel, where the 17-year-old from Pakistan was to receive honorary Canadian citizenship.

Harper's spokesman says both events have been cancelled.

Officials in prime minister's office say Harper was rushed away from the Parliament building and is safe in an undisclosed location.

Yousafzai, 17, recently became the world's youngest Nobel laureate. Organizers of the Liberty Medal ceremony didn't know that would be the case when they decided months ago to honour her. But the coincidence might have been expected: She has become the seventh medal recipient to subsequently receive the Nobel Peace Prize.

The medal is given annually at the National Constitution Center to someone who strives to secure freedom for people around the world.

Pakistani schoolgirl Malala Yousafzai speaks during a media conference at the Library of Birmingham in England on Oct. 10, 2014. Yousafzai, a co-winner of this year's Nobel Peace Prize, will become the sixth person ever to receive honorary Canadian citizenship at a ceremony in Toronto this afternoon.

RUI VIEIRA/THE CANADIAN PRESS/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Tuesday's ceremony included speeches from women with powerful stories about education, including Minnijean Brown Trickey, who helped integrate a high school in the southern U.S. state of Arkansas in 1957, and University of Pennsylvania president Amy Gutmann, a first-generation college student who rose to lead an elite Ivy League school.

Gutmann, also a board member of the Constitution Center, praised Yousafzai for her "compelling vision and immense courage."

"An educated mind is the most powerful force for good on our planet," Gutmann said.

Yousafzai began her activism six years ago by using an alias to write for the BBC about living under Taliban rule. In 2012, a Taliban gunman shot her in the head while she was returning from school because of her vocal support for gender equality and education for girls.

She ended up being treated for her injury in Britain, where she recovered and now lives with her family. She attends a high school for girls but continues activism on those issues through speaking engagements, a bestselling book and a non-profit organization called the Malala Fund.

Shooting rampage sparks fresh security concerns

Parliament Hill.
Procedures will have to change: Liberal MP Marc Garneau

The fatal shooting of a soldier at the National War Memorial and the subsequent gunfire on Parliament Hill on Wednesday have renewed concerns about security in the capital.

The shootout prompted MPs to pile chairs against wooden meeting room doors to shield themselves from the gunman, forced the lockdown of much of the downtown core and left a suspect dead in the Centre Block.

MPs and senators have been nervous for years about how easily members of the public can access the Parliament Buildings. Canada's role in the campaign against militants in the Middle East has heightened concerns in recent weeks.

Two years ago, the country's auditor general called for better security measures on the Hill.

Four separate bodies watch over Parliament Hill — the RCMP's Parliament Hill detachment, the House of Commons Security Services, the Senate Protective Service and the Ottawa police, which is responsible for the city streets surrounding the buildings.

In a 2012 report, Auditor General Michael Ferguson suggested unifying the security forces "under a single point of command, making it possible to respond to situations more efficiently and effectively."

In the aftermath of Wednesday's shootings, Liberal MP Marc Garneau said security procedures will have to change.

"I think the intention was to try to make Parliament not look like Fort Knox," he said. "But we've crossed a river today."

Garneau pointed out that while visitors go through metal detectors, most parliamentary offices are easily accessible once those people are in the buildings.

"The point is, somebody who decides that they want to rush the building can walk up, rush in, show their weapon and then rush into the building before anybody can really effectively do anything," he said.

Karl Belanger, principal secretary to NDP Leader Tom Mulcair, said there's no question procedures will need to be reviewed and fixed so that such a breach never happens again.

NDP MP Charlie Angus said that as gunfire echoed through the Hall of Honour during the party's caucus meeting on Wednesday morning, "suddenly those parliamentary caucus doors looked very, very flimsy."

But Angus added he hopes the Hill doesn't become a fortress as a result of the shooting.

"I just think what's really important to remember from this is that Parliament Hill is an incredible public place that's open for people to play football and come and protest and sit and have their lunches, do their yoga," he said.

"We can't lose that. We need to make it more secure, we need to make sure people can be safe ... but we can never lose sight (that it's) an open place where Canadians feel welcome."

Liberal MP John McKay had the same feeling.

"That building is the people's building and we've been able to pride ourselves on its accessibility to people," he said. "I hate to think of us shutting it down because of both paranoia and legitimate fears. It really changes everything."

Late last year, the RCMP added new video cameras near pedestrian entrances to Parliament Hill, and a vehicle screening facility along Wellington Street, the boulevard in front of the Parliament Buildings.

Some cameras can record panoramic views and close up images. The RCMP apparently monitors the video stream round-the-clock, with simultaneous feeds to House of Commons and Senate security personnel.

Canadians react to an attack on Parliament Hill by a masked gunman, who shot and killed a soldier standing guard at the National War Memorial in Ottawa

Two Edmonton Catholic schools were locked down after the shooting because some of the students were from military families. The children were kept inside for recess and lunch breaks.

Victoria

This week, some provincial politicians were warned about heightened security concerns from officials in Ottawa, according to the clerk of the B.C. legislature. Craig James said officials at the legislature received information from Ottawa that there could be a problem and he briefed several elected members of the provincial legislature.

A memorial for Cpl. Nathan Cirillo has been set up at the gates of the James Street Armoury in Hamilton. He belonged to the Argyll & Sutherland Highlanders of Canada, an infantry unit of the Canadian Forces primary reserves.

Abroad

The U.S. military increased security at the Tomb of the Unknowns at Arlington National Cemetery after the shootings in Ottawa, even though the FBI and the Homeland Security Department said there was no specific threat against the United States.

Halifax

A source in the Defence Department says personnel in Halifax were advised to avoid appearing in uniform in public places. The source confirmed that an email asked staff "to restrict movement in uniform in public as much as possible."

Mystery of missing dino bones solved

Deinocheirus.

International efforts help to bring together missing and stolen parts belonging to a beast long extinct

A 50-year-old mystery involving poachers and missing dinosaur bones has been solved by an international team of paleontologists, including one from the University of Alberta.

A pair of 2.4-metre-long forelimbs belonging to the Deinocheirus mirificus was discovered in Mongolia in 1965. The size of the limbs led some to speculate the dinosaur was some kind of gargantuan theropod - much larger than Tyrannosaurus rex.

But the rest of the skeleton and location of the quarry were lost until paleontologists located them in 2009 using a hand-drawn map.

"We looked for years to find the quarry where the Deinocheirus came from," said Phil Currie, professor and Canada research chair in dinosaur paleobiology at the University of Alberta.

Evidence in the quarry included isolated bones, broken blocks and some money tucked under a rock as an offering to the gods, which all suggested that the area had been poached.

"The poachers knew what they had, but they only took certain more-saleable parts," said Currie.

"The damaged specimen was missing its skull, hands and feet, but included an easily recognizable hefty left forearm, making it clearly identifiable as Deinocheirus."

Word of the find made its way to those who deal in the sale of dinosaur artifacts in the underground fossil market. Currie was contacted about a fossil dealer in Europe, who had what was clearly a Deinocheirus arm, but also feet and even more incredibly a skull.

Dino facts

Deinocheirus dates back to around 70 million years ago

- Origin. Deinocheirus, from Greek, means "terrible hand." It is a genus of large theropod dinosaur.
- Description. The dinosaur had 2.4 metre forelimbs that featured long recurved claws that measured up to 19.8 centimetres in length.

"What gave us a clue that it was the poached Deinocheirus specimen that we collected was the fact that the hand was divided between the specimen in Europe and the poached specimen we collected in Mongolia."

The skull and other pieces found in Europe fit perfectly with the rest of the specimen that was unearthed in Mongolia, nearly completing the skeleton. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Lax, unenforced rules for unlicensed daycares a cause for concern, ombudsman says

Quoted

"Her death signalled significant problems beneath the surface."

Andre Marin, on the death of two-year-old Eva Ravikovich who died while in unlicensed daycare

Unlicensed daycares in Ontario operate under lax and barely enforced rules in a system with legal loopholes, the province's ombudsman has found in an investigation prompted by the death of a two-year-old girl.

Eva Ravikovich was one of four children in the Greater Toronto Area to die in an unlicensed daycare in a seven-month period, but she was "a bit like a canary in a coal mine," said ombudsman Andre Marin.

"Her death signalled significant problems beneath the surface," he said in a statement.

Marin cancelled a planned news conference to unveil his report following shootings on and near Parliament Hill in Ottawa.

There are some 823,000 children of school age in unlicensed daycares across the province, Marin said in a news release.

But the government will only conduct an inspection if it has reason to believe the facility has too many children, which usually only happens if a complaint is made.

Each year the Ministry of Education gets hundreds of complaints about unlicensed daycares and finds more than 25 per cent are substantiated, he said.

However, the system for receiving and responding to those complaints suffers from "entrenched organizational malaise," Marin said. He slammed the "passive" enforcement culture and inconsistent complaint tracking.

"As lax as the rules are for unlicensed daycares, they were barely being enforced by a bureaucracy that shied away from inspections and investigations and preferred to use soft tools of encouragement instead," Marin said in a statement.

Marin is not recommending that all daycares be licensed, but is urging the Ministry of Education to consider a centralized registry and tougher standards for the unlicensed sector.

Though the Ministry of Education is already acting on the bulk of Marin's 113 recommendations, he said it's "too little, too late."

"At a certain point, you have to ask, what could be more pressing, more urgent, than protecting children?" Marin said.

Unlicensed daycare operators can't care for more than five unrelated children under the age of 10, not counting their own kids. But Marin said 29 children and 14 dogs were allegedly found amid "unsanitary and dangerous conditions" at Eva's daycare.

The ministry failed to follow up on multiple complaints, about the home daycare in Vaughan, Ont., Marin said.

Law to target software makers

Canada's controversial anti-spam law has already forced businesses to change how they communicate with consumers by email.

Starting on Jan. 15, 2015, the law will also start targeting software makers. # Cluster bomb. Iraq veteran now an advocate against munitions he once dropped Richard MacCormac was literally thunderstruck when he fired his first cluster bomb.

Part of a British bombing raid on Saddam Hussein's invading forces inside Kuwait in January 1991, MacCormac and his fellow Jaguar fighter jet pilots were "taken aback" by the extraordinary expanse of dust and damage the weapons created.

Their radios were unusually silent as they returned to their base in Bahrain.

"Even though you know exactly how it's going to happen, seeing it operate for the first time provides an immediacy and intimacy that you don't get by reading about weapons," MacCormac said in an interview.

MacCormac, 51, retired in 2010 after a 25-year career in the British air force, and now leads a Danish aid agency's efforts clean up the remnants of deadly cluster bombs in nine countries.

He is also an advocate for an outright ban of a weapon critics say is indiscriminate and inaccurate with a long history of maiming innocent civilians, and has no useful place on any modern battlefield.

Woman charged over dead infants in storage locker

Andrea Giesbrecht. Winnipeg resident faces six counts of concealing a body; forensic tests should give case more clarity

Police have charged a woman who was renting a storage locker where the remains of six babies were found, but they say it could be months before they know who the infants were or how they died.

Andrea Giesbrecht, 40, was arrested outside her home in north Winnipeg. Const. Eric Hofley said she faces six charges of concealing a body and one charge of breaching probation. Giesbrecht has also used the name Andrea Naworynski.

Hofley said it will take an extensive forensic investigation to determine if she is related to the dead infants. The state of the remains discovered Monday was such that police were initially unable to determine how many babies were in the locker. Their ages are still unknown, but they are believed to have been newborns, he said.

"The forensics that are going to be involved in this investigation, they're numerous," Hofley said Wednesday. "It will be a long time before we're able to answer these questions — if at all."

There are no homicide-related charges right now and police aren't interviewing any other suspects, Hofley added.

Greg Brodsky, Giesbrecht's lawyer, said he had seen a preliminary outline of the charges and met with his client. "She's in bewilderment," he said.

Giesbrecht was initially arrested on murder charges, but those weren't the charges that were filed with the court, Brodsky said. That indicates the autopsy and forensic investigation isn't complete yet, he said.

"The forensic examination is really important," Brodsky said. "There has to be an autopsy conducted in order to determine where this case is going."

The breach of probation charge laid by police relates to two charges for fraud over $5,000 that were laid against Giesbrecht in 2012. She will be applying for bail and a date for that hearing is expected to be set Thursday, Brodsky said.

Walk a mile for that cigarette? Tobacco giant Reynolds will still allow use of smokeless products such as e-cigs

Camel cigarette maker Reynolds American Inc. is snuffing out smoking in its offices and buildings.

The nation's second-biggest tobacco company informed employees Wednesday that beginning next year, the use of traditional cigarettes, cigars or pipes will no longer be permitted at employee desks or offices, conference rooms, hallways and elevators.

Lighting up already is prohibited on factory floors and in cafeterias and fitness centres.

The no-smoking policy will go into effect once Reynolds builds indoor smoking areas for those still wanting to light up indoors, spokesman David Howard said.

"We're just better aligning our tobacco use policies with the realities of what you're seeing in society today," Howard said.

While Reynolds will no longer allow smoking, it will allow the use of smokeless tobacco products, including electronic cigarettes, moist snuff and pouches of finely milled tobacco called snus (pronounced "snoose").

The company also will allow the use of Eclipse, a cigarette made by Reynolds that uses a carbon tip that heats tobacco after being lit by a lighter. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Online harassment. Young adults are most likely targets, new survey finds

A new study confirms what many Internet users know all too well: Harassment is a common part of online life.

The first-of-its-kind report by the Pew Research Center found that nearly three-quarters of American adults who use the Internet have witnessed online harassment. Forty per cent have experienced it themselves.

The types of harassment Pew asked about range from name-calling to physical threats, sexual harassment and stalking. Half of those who were harassed said they didn't know the person who had most recently attacked them.

Case in point: Celebrities. Stars such as the actress Jennifer Lawrence had nude photos stolen and posted online recently in a widespread hacking scandal in late August. Lawrence, 24, later told Vanity Fair that she considered looking at the pictures a sex crime.

It can be difficult for police to go after online bullies in

Stats

- Young adults — people 18 to 29 — were the most likely age group to see and undergo online harassment.
- Women ages 18 to 24 were disproportionately the victims of stalking and sexual harassment, according to the survey
- People who have more information available about themselves online, work in the tech industry or promote themselves on the Internet, were also more likely to be harassed.

Nebraska to Arizona

Trucker drives lost pooch 2,200 km to its owners

A Nebraska trucker has taken a lost bull mastiff on a 2,220-kilometre trip back to her owners in Arizona.

The Lincoln Journal Star reports Dani and Jason Windham were getting ready for their Aug. 4 wedding in Nebraska when their three dogs knocked down a fence and ran. Animal control found the other two, but not Koda.

Seven days later, the Windhams moved to Camp Verde, Arizona. Last week, Koda was found after a farmer reported a dog chasing his cattle.

The Windhams couldn't afford to fly her back, so a lost pets group in Nebraska put out a call for help. Truck driver Jimmy Dimmit answered. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Blackwater guards found guilty in Iraq shootings

2007 incident. Trial focused on killings of 14 people and wounding of 17 others in Baghdad

Four former Blackwater security guards were convicted Wednesday in the 2007 shootings of more than 30 Iraqis in Baghdad, an incident that inflamed anti-American sentiment around the globe and was denounced by critics as an illustration of a war gone horribly wrong.

The men claimed self-defence, but U.S. prosecutors argued that they had shown "a grave indifference" to the carnage their actions would cause. All four were ordered immediately to jail.

Their lawyers are promising to file appeals. The judge did not immediately set a sentencing date.

The federal jury found Nicholas Slatten guilty of first-degree murder, the most serious charge in a multi-count indictment.

The three other guards — Paul Slough, Evan Liberty and Dustin Heard — were found guilty of multiple counts of voluntary manslaughter, attempted manslaughter and gun violations.

David Schertler, a lawyer for Heard, said, "The verdict is wrong, it's incomprehensible. We're devastated. We're going to fight it every step of the way. We still think we're going to win."

The State Department had hired Blackwater to protect American diplomats in Baghdad, the Iraqi capital, and elsewhere in the country. Blackwater convoys of four heavily armoured vehicles operated in risky environments where car bombs and attacks by insurgents were common.

On the murder charge, Slatten could face a maximum penalty of life in prison. The other three defendants could face decades behind bars.

The trial itself focused on the killings of 14 Iraqis and the wounding of 17 others. During an 11-week trial, prosecutors summoned 72 witnesses, including Iraqi victims, their families and former colleagues of the defendant Blackwater guards.

Kidnapped schoolgirls still being held hostage

Days after Nigeria's military raised hopes with the announcement that Islamic extremists had agreed to a ceasefire, Boko Haram is still fighting and there is no word on the fate of the 219 schoolgirls held hostage for six months.

Officials had said talks would resume in neighbouring Chad this week, but there was no confirmation that those negotiations had resumed by Wednesday.

The official silence raises many questions, especially since Boko Haram's leader Abubakar Shekau has not confirmed that a truce has been agreed.

Relatives of the girls abducted from a boarding school in northeastern Chibok town said they are confused but trying to be hopeful.

Nigeria's Foreign Minister Aminu Wali on Tuesday said "I can say with some optimism, cautious optimism, that we are moving toward a situation where we'd be able to, in the very near future, to be able to get back our girls."

Wali spoke at a news conference in Berlin of "the possibility of having total cessation of hostilities."

Despite the ceasefire announced by the military on Friday, the Islamic insurgents have attacked two villages and a town in the northeast and raised their flag in a fourth village. In Nigeria's capital, Abuja, dozens of activists continue a daily protest ritual at Unity Fountain, using the hashtag #BringBackOurGirls to demand that the government and military ensure the release of the students.

Some 276 girls and young women writing science examinations were kidnapped from a government boarding school in Chibok in the early hours of April 15. Dozens escaped by themselves in the first couple of days but some 219 remain missing. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

'CANADA WILL NEVER BE INTIMIDATED'

Prime Minister Stephen Harper in a screengrab of his televised statement from an undisclosed location in Ottawa on Wednesday night, the full transcript of which is below. PMO/THE CANADIAN PRESS

My fellow Canadians.

For the second time this week, there has been a brutal and violent attack on our soil. Today our thoughts and prayers are with the family and friends of Cpl. Nathan Cirillo of the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders. Cpl. Cirillo was killed today, murdered in cold blood as he provided a ceremonial honour guard at Canada's National War Memorial, that sacred place that pays tribute to those who gave their lives so that we can live in a free, democratic and safe society.

Likewise our thoughts and prayers remain also with the family and friends of Warrant Officer Patrice Vincent, who was killed earlier this week by an ISIL-inspired terrorist.

Tonight we also pray for the speedy recovery of the others injured in these despicable attacks.

Fellow Canadians, we've also been reminded today of the compassionate and courageous nature of so many Canadians — like those private citizens and first responders who came to provide aid to Cpl. Cirillo as he fought for his life. And of course the members of our security forces, in the RCMP, the City of Ottawa police, and in Parliament, who came quickly and at great risk to themselves to assist those of us who were close to the attack.

Fellow Canadians, in the days to come, we will learn more about the terrorist and any accomplices he may have had. But this week's events are a grim reminder that Canada is not immune to the types of terrorist attacks we have seen elsewhere around the world.

We are also reminded that attacks on our security personnel and on our institutions of governance are by their very nature, attacks on our country, on our values. On our society, on us Canadians as a free and democratic people who embrace human dignity for all.

But let there be no misunderstanding. We will not be intimidated. Canada will never be intimidated. In fact, this will lead us to strengthen our resolve and redouble our efforts and those of our national security agencies to take all necessary steps to identify and counter threats and keep Canada safe here at home, just as it will lead us to strengthen our resolve and redouble our efforts to work with our allies around the world and fight against the terrorist organizations who brutalize those in other countries with the hope of bringing their savagery to our shores. They will have no safe haven.

While today has been without question a difficult day, I have no doubt Canadians will pull together with the kind of firm solidarity that has seen our country through many challenges. Together we will remain vigilant against those at home or abroad who wish to harm us.

For now, Laureen and I and Ben and Rachel join all Canadians in praying for those touched by today's attack. May God bless them and keep our land glorious and free.

NDP Leader Tom Mulcair

'We will not forget'

"I stand here tonight in solidarity, side-by-side with my colleagues, with our Prime Minister and with all Canadians.

"This attack struck with sudden and deadly violence.

"It was intended to make us more fearful of our neighbours and less confident in ourselves.

"But it has failed. "Today's events have instead only succeeded in drawing us closer, in making us stronger.

"We woke up this morning in a country blessed by love, diversity and peace, and tomorrow we will do the same.

"Canada is shaken today, but we shall not waver."

EXCERPTS EDITED BY METRO

Liberal Leader Justin Trudeau

'We will get answers'

"It was a cowardly act. An unarmed man was murdered in cold blood.

"Losing ourselves to fear and speculation is the intention of those who commit these heinous acts.

"We will remember who we are. We are a proud democracy. A welcoming and peaceful nation.

"We have remained Canadians and this is how we will carry on.

"The picture in our minds we have is of Canadians helping and protecting Canadians. That is who we truly are."

Class act for the Redblacks

Gridiron gentlemen.

Sir Red and Sir Blacks started out innocently enough, then their idea snowballed

Alex Cruder and Paul Atkinson are just a couple of guys who like football — and dressing up like gentlemen while mingling with fans at Ottawa Redblacks games.

Atkinson, a.k.a. Sir Blacks, says the whole idea started innocently enough, then kind of snowballed.

"I saw this thing about these two Australian guys doing average, everyday things, just dressed as gentlemen sirs," Atkinson explains. "I called up my buddy Alex, I said, 'Dude, we have to do this — just go around town, dressed as sirs and have a bunch of pictures taken.' He came up with the idea of doing it at the football games."

At the first home game, Sir Red and Sir Blacks were featured on the big screen and even featured on TSN.

"I think, because of that, a lot of people seem to think that we have something to do with the team, but we really don't. We're just fans. We just kind of fell over backwards into it and started to run with it and it's been a blast."

Cruder says the experience has been hilarious.

"One of the things that's really great about the games is, if you're on the south side, on that concourse level where the food and the drink is, that tends to be where a lot of the mascots like us hang out, so invariably we're talking to some log driver, or a snowman," he laughs.

"With these two characters, everything has to be larger than life, so it's like 'Hellooooo,' says Cruder in his Sir Red character accent.

"We always try to speak as much old-timey lingo as possible. Things like, 'We are attending today's Canadian Rugby Football Union match. Hopefully our side will be victorious,'" says Atkinson, stressing it's not a British accent, since they are speaking as proper Canadian gentlemen at the turn of the 20th century.

"Sort of a Murdoch Mysteries sort of thing," he says.

Although they aren't officially affiliated with the team, some members of the Redblacks are starting to take notice of Sir Red and Sir Blacks' presence at games. Quarterback Henry Burris has recently started following the duo on Twitter (@SirRedSirBlacks).

Filmmaker interview. Birdman's big risks rewarded with Oscar buzz

Alejandro Gonzalez Inarritu had never attempted making a comedy until Birdman. CONTRIBUTED

Oscar-nominated filmmaker Alejandro Gonzalez Inarritu admits it was "scary" making the dark comedy Birdman (The Unexpected Virtue of Ignorance), and he was warned by one of his peers that he was "running to a possibility of failure" by doing it.

"To make a comedy, first, is always a big challenge, especially for somebody who has never done comedy," the film's director and co-writer said in a recent telephone interview. "And the way I decided to do it, which is this one-take thing, it's a very difficult task in a way that challenges you technically and conceptually, because you have to make a lot of decisions and sacrifices by that, and be very aware."

"As one director told me — you're running to disaster."

Turns out that wasn't the case.

Birdman, starring Michael Keaton as a former avian superhero film star desperate for validation and a comeback as he heads an ambitious new Broadway play, is flying high in critics' eyes.

Keaton's performance as Riggan Thomson is already the subject of serious Oscar talk, while praise is also being heaped on the rest of the A-list cast that includes Naomi Watts, Edward Norton, Andrea Riseborough, Zach Galifianakis and Emma Stone.

Rave reviews are also pouring in for Inarritu's "long take" filmmaking style in which the camera follows the actors around the theatre for lengthy periods of time as they rehearse and perform the play, making it seem as if the entire project is one uninterrupted shot.

The Mexican native was delving into foreign territory with the film, which hits theatres on Friday, and says that's just the way he likes it.

"I always find myself much better in an uncomfortable zone," said Inarritu, whose films Amores Perros and Biutiful received Oscar nominations for best foreign language film, while 2006's Babel was up for best picture and best directing.

"When I become comfortable, I become a little angry and depressed and not happy. So I like to be challenged. I like that something excites me or scares me, because if not, I am incomplete."

A snapshot of life as a conflict photographer

Movies. Juliette Binoche takes on the role of a truth-seeking photojournalist in 1,000 Times Good Night

Juliette Binoche is known for pouring everything into her performances. For her role as a dedicated war photographer in 1,000 Times Good Night, she met with top journalists who have captured global atrocities — not only to understand their work, but their personal lives and motivations.

"It just showed me how meaningful it is and how much it costs. And how they organize themselves and how it can be also very tricky in their personal life," the French actress said in a phone interview. "You have to find the right people around you to help you in this difficult journey, because it's not that easy. You're seeing horror and you're alone."

Opening Friday, the film features Binoche as Rebecca, a photojournalist who returns home from Kabul after an especially close brush with death. Her husband (Nikolaj Coster-Waldau) seethes with resentment as he has been busy raising their two daughters while she risks her life in conflict zones.

The rift in their marriage worsens when she takes their daughter (Laurn Canny) on a trip to Kenya that erupts in violence. Rebecca again makes a decision that puts her as close to the danger as possible — the kind of snap judgement call she makes instinctively and her husband can no longer support.

Norwegian director Erik Poppe (Troubled Water) based the film on his own experience as a former war photographer. But he chose to switch the genders in the film, making Binoche his proxy and casting Coster-Waldau as the character based on his wife.

Binoche said she was drawn to 1,000 Times Good Night because she had always been fascinated by war photography. She met with Lynsey Addario, an acclaimed photojournalist known for her work in Afghanistan and Gaza, as well as Zorah Miller, Marcus Bleasdale and others.

"I was wondering as I was talking to them, 'Where is the need coming from?' As an actress of course I was thinking, 'Oh, it's all in the childhood,' the need of being seen and heard and going to very dangerous places — seen and heard because you were not seen and heard in your childhood," Binoche said.

Rebecca is often accused by family and friends of being addicted to the excitement and danger. But she is also determined to make people sit up and pay attention to the horrors of the world: "I want people to choke on their coffee and see and feel and react," she says.

This need to bear witness to injustice is a true motivation of war photographers, said Binoche.

"Witnessing places in the world ... can change, not always, but can change the consciousness of people and also political decisions. So the power it gives to consciousness is also very much what very high-profile war journalists and photographers are doing."

No hideaway for super-busy Kiesza

Music. Calgary artist feeling 'vulnerable' as her debut album Sound of a Woman is released this week

With the one-shot, non-stop Hideaway, Calgary's Kiesza introduced herself to the world with a fluttering tune and a flurry of nimble footwork — and it seems like she hasn't stopped moving since.

The song topped charts in Italy, Belgium, the Netherlands and the U.K. while reaching the Top 5 in many others, including Canada, in the spring. Her debut album, Sound of a Woman, was completed fairly quickly before its release this week.

She's still writing songs for other artists, she contributed music to a 2015 Dreamworks film, and she has designs on making her own cult flick eventually — not as a composer, but a filmmaker. Of course, that's joined by other potential pursuits, including a fashion line. A European tour is also imminent.

No longer an indie artist, Kiesza couldn't be blamed if she decided to delegate some responsibilities. Yet there she was recently touring possible settings for her second video, No Enemies.

"The producer just stopped for a minute and said, 'The artist never comes to the location scout. You realize this? If you have other things to do ...'" Kiesza recalled during a recent interview in Toronto. "I'm like, 'No, I need to see the rooms.' I was involved in saying this is the room I want and I want it to look this way. And this is the section I'm dancing in here."

Kiesza performs her hit song Hideaway at the Much Music Video Awards in June. STEVE RUSSELL/TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

"Sometimes the people, they don't give you that time for your art because they'd rather have you doing other things, more promo, but I put so much effort into the quality of my work. So for me, it's the most important thing that I put the time in and the preparation. The art is everything to me."

So even though the turnaround on Sound of a Woman was fairly quick, it's tough to doubt Kiesza's commitment to the material.

Aside from the years-in-the-works synth bath So Deep, these 13 songs came together very quickly — something Kiesza's comfortable with, given that break-out Hideaway was written during an hour-long ride to the airport.

That sleekly propulsive number leads off the album. Hip hop crops up on the vamping Losin' My Mind and even more so on Bad Thing, a showcase for dexterous Brooklyn teen rapper Joey Badass, one of a series of genres Kiesza hopscoches through: soul, Chicago house, R&B and EDM.

"They all have a place in my mind from a similar era," she summarized.

That would be the '90s, when the 25-year-old was exposed to a variety of sounds by her musically adventurous mother. Some of Kiesza's earliest memories feature her mom hot-stepping around the kitchen while club music poured from the speakers.

"I don't know how she got into the whole Chicago house thing, because she's from Calgary — which is very much a country-music town," laughed Kiesza, born Kiesa Ellestad, reasoning that Michael Jackson was a gateway.

"She was always busting out, making breakfast for us in the morning as kids, busting out these massive dance records with divas singing on them. We'd wake up to my mom singing at the top of her lungs."

Her upbringing was similarly marked by broad aptitude and a wandering interest. She trained as a ballerina as a girl, but hurt her knee; began sailing at 13 and worked on 40-metre-high boats at 16; and a year later joined the reserves of the Royal Canadian Navy, where she proved a crack shot.

She studied music at Selkirk College in B.C. before being granted a scholarship

Quoted

"This is the music that's etched into my DNA, since being in the womb. It just flows out of me naturally"

Kiesza, singer and songwriter to attend Berklee College of Music in Boston.

Her earliest compositions were simple and quiet.

"When I started writing music on the guitar, it started off very folksy because of my limited ability to play," she said. "It was slow, soft melodies. But then as I got better on the guitar, I started exploring different sounds."

As usual, she jumped around a bit.

"I was in a death metal band, a jazz band, a rock band, a solo pop thing where I wore spandex and aviator goggles dyed different colours," she recalled. "I felt like I was just trying on different hats and they didn't fit."

"And then writing Hideaway, which happened out of nowhere, and realizing this is so right, realizing that this is the music that's etched into my DNA, since being in the womb. It just flows out of me naturally."

At Berklee, pop music was the subject of derision or outright dismissal — "at music school, pop is considered not music" — but Kiesza studied it like an academic. She wanted to look carefully at trends in country, rock, pop, dance and rap, figuring that penning songs for artists across genres represented the best application of her talent.

That songwriting career has been moved to the side for now, though she's waiting to find out whether three of her songs chosen by Rihanna will appear on the Barbadian star's next album.

Kiesza, who now lives in New York, says she's writing her second album now, utilizing the one big indulgence she's allowed since Hideaway hit: a new guitar.

Originally, Kiesza thought of her solo music as a side project and figured it would be "underground, maybe with an indie following."

A bigger-than-anticipated audience is paying attention now, and she knows it.

"It's hard to open up all your emotions to the world," she said. "I feel very super-vulnerable."

Music. Sweet dreams are made of this? Legend Annie Lennox debuts new sound

How do you follow in the footsteps of Frank Sinatra and Ray Charles without sinking in the footsteps of Frank Sinatra and Ray Charles? The answer, for Annie Lennox at least, is to throw out, to the greatest degree possible, the work of these giants and tackle some of their classics anew: no use of their phrasing, their arrangements, their orchestral sheets allowed.

The former Eurythmics star sat down — slowly and deliberately — with songs like Mood Indigo and Georgia on My Mind and reduced them to their bare essentials before building them up, in her own style, without trying to recapture the past. That's the strategy she has used in her new album released Tuesday called Nostalgia, a move into jazz that pays homage to the Great American Songbook and takes her miles away stylistically from the 1980s hits that brought her international fame.

The challenge was to do it her way — sorry, Frank — so the songs could sound fresh. The last thing she wanted to do was imitate the masters, including Billie Holiday, whose signature songs God Bless the

Inspiration

"I was just singing for fun and then it occurred to me, actually, it was quite a bit of fun."

Annie Lennox says the idea for the album started to percolate two years ago when she was in Washington rehearsing with Herbie Hancock and his jazz band for a performance at an AIDS benefit.

Child and Strange Fruit are featured.

"I tried to step away from all the other arrangements," said Lennox, who worked on the album alone with her voice and a keyboard in a rented cottage in Cape Town, South Africa. "I tried to strip them down to their raw, bare version. Once I knew I could do that, just singing and playing the chords on piano, getting to the core of the song, without any elaboration, then I could work on it, from the core root up."

She wanted to avoid the "inherent danger" of just covering the songs, imitating the greatest vocalists of the last century with the help of a skilled arranger and an orchestra leader.

Standup talks sitting at Weekend Update desk

Television. The first African-American to co-anchor SNL's news segment dishes on life in his hometown, new gig

NED EHRBAR
Metro in Hollywood

It's safe to say New York City has been good to native Michael Che. The comedian and writer is co-anchor of Saturday Night Live's Weekend Update — and the first African-American to sit behind the desk — a gig he left The Daily Show with Jon Stewart to take. And now he's the face of the #NYTough campaign. Not too shabby. But that doesn't mean life in New York isn't still without its drawbacks.

What's your approach to Weekend Update, as the newest anchor behind the desk?

My approach is just talking about things that I would like to see talked about and telling the jokes that I think are really funny. The feedback's been great. It's still a process of learning how to do the job better. I feel like every week is a process of getting better, and we're definitely headed in the right direction, and me and (co-anchor Colin) Hanks are having a lot of fun up there.

Was there any level of intimidation factor the first time you sat there?

Oh, absolutely. It's extremely intimidating because you're doing something that a lot of people care about. A lot of people care about Saturday Night Live and Weekend Update — they grew up with it, it's important to them. So it's very intimidating. It's like you're babysitting somebody's kid. You don't want it to get messed up on your shift.

You've done both SNL and The Daily Show now, which is impressive. Do other NYC comics resent you for hogging all the opportunities?

They shouldn't. If they are, they're thinking of the wrong things. They're looking at it weird, because the more New York comedians getting jobs on Update or Daily Show or SNL, if we do it, well it makes it easier for the next guy because they're always looking for the next one.

Comedy is a cycle, so the more people that are like you that get these opportunities, the better. When Hannibal (Bures) gets these opportunities, I feel like I got it because it's opening doors. So be happy for me and Pete Davidson for being standups that are doing these shows because now they're going to be looking for more standups.

You're a native New Yorker. Everyone always talks about how much safer and cleaner the city has become over the last 20 or 30 years, but do you think it's gotten any tougher to live here?

New York is still the toughest city, I believe, but it's different. Obviously it's a lot more expensive and a lot faster. Technology has made things a lot easier, and it's a lot safer than it used to be, but it's still tough. Just ask anybody on the 29th when rent is due how tough New York really is.

Is there a particular NYC odour that's the worst for you?

Oh man, there's plenty of New York smells, but the empty car on a crowded subway is the worst smell in New York City. You walk in because you say, "Wow, there are seats!" Every other car is crowded. Then as soon as you get on you get why that train car is empty — because it smells to holy hell and the doors are closed and you can't get off. That's the toughest thing to smell in New York, in my opinion.

You used to be able to actually walk between the cars.

You used to! You used to be able to walk through the cars, but I guess a lot of people got hurt so they stopped that. I feel like New York has grown up a lot as far as safety. It used to be you could do a lot of dangerous things, but now there's a cop stand on every corner. It's changed in that way. It's still a tough place to live.

Television. Ryan Murphy sells another horror series

American Horror Story creator Ryan Murphy will mine a similar vein with Scream Queens, a new horror-comedy series ordered by Fox, The Hollywood Reporter reveals.

Due to air in fall 2015, the first series is set on a college campus rocked by a series of murders. The idea is to reprise the anthology format of the FX series American Horror Story, introducing a new setting and plot each season.

The first 15 episodes ordered by Fox will centre on two heroines.

Scream Queens is Murphy's third series slated to air on American TV next fall. Along with American Horror Story, which will enter its fifth season, FX will air its new spinoff American Crime Story. Murphy's Fox series Glee will end after its sixth cycle, which is due to premiere mid-season.

Next year, NBC plans to introduce Shades of Blue (a crime series produced by Jennifer Lopez), Manhunt and Heroes: Reborn. The latter will mark the return of Tim Kring's series after five years off-air. AFP

Private life is off-limits, says Stalker star

Television. Maggie Q, who had her own brush with stalking, believes people should safeguard privacy

For Maggie Q, her new series, Stalker, hits close to home. But not too close, if Maggie can help it. She sees privacy, and guarding her personal space, as vital to her freedom.

Even so, she has had her own brush with a stalker.

"He thought he had a relationship with me that wasn't happening," she says, recalling the delusional fan. "I didn't know that person!"

As a past star of Asian-based action films, after which she played the title character of the CW thriller Nikita for four seasons, Maggie has done her best to evade off-screen attention.

Now, in the early weeks of her new series, which airs Wednesdays at 10 p.m. EDT on CBS, she has braced for an even greater challenge to her goal of staying out of the public eye.

On Stalker, she and Dylan McDermott star as detectives who investigate stalking incidents for the Threat Assessment Unit of the Los Angeles Police Department. Maggie hopes her series will shine a light on the trauma of being stalked, and serve as a reminder that everyone can take steps to safeguard their private lives.

"With social media today, all our lives are more accessible and on display," she observes. "There's an immediacy in our culture now, where whatever you feel at this moment enters your head and comes out your fingertips into your phone and into the world."

Unless, that is, like Maggie, you disrupt the flow.

"I'm very bad on social media," she says with a laugh.

"I don't find myself that interesting!"

Maggie Q, who plays Detective Beth Davis on Stalker

"I post nothing. I don't have Instagram, and I've never had Facebook."

Maggie finds celebrity worship bewildering.

"Look at the people who are in the news," she says, pointing to gossip-media royalty. "I don't find them fascinating. I think they're a bunch of idiots. But everybody's interested in their lives. I don't understand that. I never understood when it was happening to me."

That was in Asia more than a decade ago, when, to her chagrin, she realized she had punched her way to fan-zine fame as a breakout action star. Why were celebrity rags dogging her? She doesn't seem sure herself. "I don't find myself that interesting!" she says during a recent interview in Manhattan.

Now 35, she was born Margaret Denise Quigley to an American father and a Vietnamese mother, and after growing up in Hawaii with an athletic bent, she found success as a model in Hong Kong to earn money for school.

Her modelling career didn't last long. Jackie Chan signed her to appear in a new slate of younger-skewing action films he wanted to produce.

Today, Maggie (whose credits include Live Free or Die Hard, the recent Divergent and Mission Impossible: III, her first U.S. production) is widely recognized as an "action star," which, she concedes, has a pejorative ring, "like I do pushups for a living, not acting."

"When I started in action films," says Maggie, "the idea of action was the (Steven) Seagals and the (Jean-Claude) Van Dammes, who aren't A-list actors, not by any means. And the genre was associated with that level of acting."

"Now every A-list actor in Hollywood is doing what I've been doing for 17 years."

Billy Bob finally clears the air about that vampire rumour

If you've been waiting and waiting for Billy Bob Thornton to finally address that whole Angelina Jolie wearing a vial of blood around her neck thing from more than a decade ago — then first of all, weird. And second of all, it's your lucky day! While speaking at Loyola Marymount University in L.A. recently, the Sling Blade actor was asked about his ex-wife's infamous piece of jewelry. "I think it's your duty to kind of tell people the truth about this stuff, and the truth is not encouraged anymore," Thornton says. So here's the truth: "You know those locketts you buy that are clear and you put a picture of your granny in it or something like that and wear it around your neck? That's what it was," he explains. "She thought it would be interesting and romantic if we took a little razor blade and sliced our fingers, smeared a little blood on these locketts and you wear it around your neck just like you wear your son or daughter's baby hair in one. Same thing. From that, we were wearing quart jars of blood around our necks. And we were vampires and we lived in a dungeon." I knew it!

Zellweger isn't afraid to 'face' media frenzy

NED EHRBAR
Metro in Hollywood

So if you were anywhere around the Internet earlier this week, you heard about Renee Zellweger and reactions to her recent red carpet appearance. Or, more specifically, reactions to her face. Well, apparently Zellweger was listening. And in a move completely uncharacteristic of celebrity culture, she has offered her own response to the fracas. Only it's more awesome in theory than in practice. "I'm glad folks think I look different! I'm living a different, happy, more fulfilling life, and I'm thrilled that perhaps it shows," she tells People magazine. She also calls all the discussion and debate "silly," which isn't exactly the word I'd use for it, but there you go.

"It seems the folks who come digging around for some nefarious truth which doesn't exist won't get off my porch until I answer the door," Zellweger continues, somehow pulling off folksy and coy simultaneously. "My friend say that I look peaceful. I am healthy. For a long time I wasn't doing such a good job with that. I took on a schedule that is not realistically sustainable and didn't allow for taking care of myself. Rather than stopping to recalibrate, I kept running until I was depleted and made bad choices about how to conceal the exhaustion. I was aware of the chaos and finally chose different things." As for talk of a drastic change in her appearance? That's just time, baby. "People don't know me in my 40s," Zellweger explains. "People don't know me healthy for a while. Perhaps I look different. Who doesn't as they get older? But I am different. I'm happy." So I guess you can get off her porch now?

Justin Timberlake and Jessica Biel

Tabloid makes nice with the Timberlakes

It turns out all Justin Timberlake and Jessica Biel really wanted was an apology, and they got one. In a Dublin courtroom this week, British tabloid Heat was forced to offer a mea culpa for reporting that Timberlake had been flirting with women in Paris this summer. "The article was based on an unfounded report regarding Justin Timberlake's alleged behaviour at a club following a performance in Paris to celebrate a birthday and also included a number of purported statements improperly attributed to Jessica Biel, which Heat now understand had never been made by her," representatives for the tabloid said in a statement read in court, adding that Heat "regrets any embarrassment caused to the couple and unreservedly apologizes to them."

All about the accents

The Toronto's World MasterCard Fashion Week tents at David Pecaut Square have been hosting some of the best designers in Canada. From fringe to floral, embellishments ruled the show.

Pink Tartan

Seasoned designer Kimberley Newport-Mimran kicked things up a notch with her '70s-inspired Pink Tartan spring collection and music from bands like The Doors. Newport-Mimran said while her previous lines have been "quite pretty," she upped the ante to "a little bit sexy" with next spring's collection. "I was very inspired by looking back to the '70s but moving it forward to modern times," Newport-Mimran says. Newport-Mimran dressed models in body suits with fringe, gold and black accessories and brought the first pops of colour to the runway with a floral pattern featuring pinks, oranges and browns.

Target Canada

Under the Fashion Week tents, the focus of Target Canada was on styles for men, women and children for the chilly months. Canadian supermodel Coco Rocha sat front row for the splashy presentation, complete with a red-carpeted runway and illuminated bull's-eye logos. Cheery models showcased a vast array of cold weather wear with pretty, patterned cardigans, faux furs, quilted coats, bomber jackets and blazers. Styles for women encompassed the ultra-feminine — like sheer blouses, slinky lace camisoles and jumpsuits — alongside more edgy, embellished options like leather studded gloves.

Bustle

Bustle brought a burst of bold colours to its spring-summer collection, which combined fashionable elements and style influences from rugged athletic apparel and Mykonos, a famed sun-soaked hot spot. Creative director Shawn Hewson said they dubbed the latest line for the label An American in Mykonos with the combination of classic, American rugby-inspired prints with seaside prints inspired by the Greek island. The collection was awash in pink, lilac, turquoise and a rich range of blues, with Bustle's slick signature suiting and shirts accented with colourful buttons and patterned trims.

Sid Neigum

The Alberta-born, Toronto-based designer kicked off spring-summer 2015 collections at David Pecaut Square with a solo presentation of his intricately crafted collection inspired by modular origami. Neigum said he laser-cut the shapes out of fabric and then hand-weaved them all together. "Some of the pieces were 600 parallelograms hand-sewn together to create the geometric 3D geometry pattern. That was the starting point," he said. Neigum also made ample use of asymmetry in the hemlines of sleek skirts and belted dresses showcased within the line.

The beauty of black in every room

Decorating. Rule No. 1: Define your space with the darkest of neutrals to create impact

DESIGN CENTRE
Karl Lohnes
home@metronews.ca

There's an old rule in decorating: Every room needs a bold hit of black.

The darkness of black helps to rest the eye in rooms that are full of colour or pattern.

If overused, black can look cheap; if underused, it won't have impact.

If you want to paint a room with black, there are a few decorator rules to follow

1. Use it on one wall as a focal point only if there are a few heavy or dark furniture pieces to help balance the visual weight.

2. Paint an entire room black and create a dramatic background for a large collection of art, mirrors and draperies.

3. North-facing rooms should have red-based black colours and south-facing room should have blue-based black colours.

Want to accent your existing neutral space?

Here are some products that are sure to create trendsetting silhouettes around your home.

Eco-friendly. Philippe Starck's range of customizable houses are totally prefab

P.A.T.H. house by Starck with Riko. P.A.T.H./STARCK WITH RIKO

A swimming pool hidden under the decking? Check. Wind turbines on the roof? Check. It's all in a day's work for Philippe Starck, who unveiled the prototype for his new range of eco-friendly houses in Paris last week.

P.A.T.H. — which stands for Prefabricated Accessible Technological Homes — makes it possible for consumers to order customized, energy-positive, prefabricated houses at the click of a button.

Designed with Slovenian construction company Riko, the houses will produce more energy than they consume thanks to a combination of solar, thermal, solar photovoltaic and wind turbines on the roof.

Each house is available with an all-glass outer shell, a completely wooden structure or as a combination of both, with a huge choice in the material and colour of the facade.

Four models are available — two single-storey homes, one double-storey and a series of individual supplementary units — and clients can choose from 34 different floor layouts ranging from 140 to 350 square metres.

The houses have been designed to perform in any climate and can be ordered with stylish features such as patio decking concealing an infinity swimming pool.

Additional details include extendable steel awnings and integrated venetian blinds controlled via an iPad application.

Starck, who listed fellow Frenchman Jean Prouvé as one of his inspirations when approaching the prefab design, has been working on the project for six years.

There are lots of quick, do-it-yourself projects for making Halloween lights that welcome parties or trick-or-treaters. Besides their welcoming glow, luminaries can add sophistication or fun to a sidewalk, staircase, fireplace mantle or front stoop. And you can make them from a variety of everyday objects, from milk jugs to glass jars to paper bags. Just insert one or more battery-operated votives or a string of holiday lights into any of these DIY projects

Want your mummy?

For a mummy look, wrap a glass jar with gauze bandages and glue on two googly eyes, or wrap black-paper facial features beneath vellum or masking tape for a similar look.

Sticker treat

From the blog Making Lemonade: Wrap a glass vase in vellum or freezer paper, both of which are translucent; cut the paper to fit the vase. Add stickers to the unpatterned side of the vellum or the waxy side of the freezer paper, then rewrap and tape the paper — sticker side on the inside — to the vase with clear tape. ## Gourds night out Drill holes any size into a real or fabricated gourd or pumpkin. Use patterns or lines, or try monogramming your initial. For a pumpkin, cut an access hole at the bottom and clean it out from there. Eddie Ross, East Coast design editor for Better Homes and Gardens, recommends using a white or sugar pumpkin. The latter are used for baking; grocery stores sell them.

Hosts for ghosts

From iSaveAtoZ blog: Rinse several gallon-size plastic milk jugs. Cut a small opening near the bottom of each jug for inserting individual strings of white holiday lights, or connect three or four jugs with one long string of lights. On a flat, clean side of each jug, draw a ghost face. (isavea2z.com/easy-halloween-craft-ideas-milk-jug-ghosts)

Giving chili a wildly delicious makeover

Cookbook of the Week

Get with the trend

Karen's 'Flying D' Bison Chili. While you're changing up the meat, why not replace the kidney beans as well?

"People are usually surprised to discover that American media mogul Ted Turner is also a bison rancher who co-owns a chain of restaurants called Ted's Montana Grill," writes Jennifer Bain in Buffalo Girl Cooks Bison.

"Bison plays a key role on the menu. This chili, created by Ted's personal chef, Karen Averitt, is one of the restaurant's signature dishes. Pinto beans are a welcome change from red kidney beans.

Flying D, by the way, is one of Ted's ranches in Montana."

1. In a large pot over medium-high heat, cook the bison, stirring with a wooden spoon to break up large pieces, for 5 minutes. Add the yellow onion and garlic. Cook, stirring, until

Bison Tacos in a Bag

"It turns out that this portable meal is wildly popular at schools and fairs across North America, and it's fun to serve at home if you're having a movie night..." writes Jennifer Bain in her book Buffalo Girl Cooks Bison.

1. In a large nonstick skillet over medium-high, heat the oil. Add the bison. Cook, stirring, until the meat is browned and cooked through, about 6 to 8 minutes. Add the seasoning. Cook, stirring, for 2 minutes. Transfer the meat to a bowl.

2. Leaving the bags of tortilla chips unopened and gently crush the chips by hand. Then, using scissors, snip open the bags along the long (side) edge. Spoon equal portions of bison mixture into each bag. Serve the toppings separately, so people can add their own lettuce, tomatoes, cheese, salsa, and sour cream.

Ingredients

- 1 tbsp canola oil
- 1 lb ground bison

Bouchard falls to 0-2 at WTA Finals

Eugenie Bouchard's struggles continued at the WTA Finals on Wednesday.

The Westmount, Que., native lost 6-1, 6-3 to Serbia's Ana Ivanovic to drop to 0-2 in her group. She will face Serena Williams in her final round-robin match Thursday but has only a very slim mathematical chance of advancing to the semifinals.

Williams was hampered 6-0, 6-2 by Simona Halep on Wednesday in one of the most lopsided losses of the star American's career.

Owners vote down lottery reform

NBA owners have voted down proposed changes to the league's draft lottery system, staving off efforts to curb tanking for the time being.

The proposal was defeated 17-13 on Wednesday at the league's board of governors meetings. It was a somewhat surprising turn of events after appearing earlier in the week that there was support for reforms that would make it more difficult for teams with the worst records to secure the top pick in the draft.

The team with the worst record will still have a 25 per cent chance at getting the top pick and cannot drop lower than fourth. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

IOC grant Kosovo provisional recognition

The IOC accepted Kosovo into the Olympic fold on Wednesday, clearing the way for the former Serbian province to send an independent team to the 2016 Games in Rio de Janeiro.

The International Olympic Committee executive board granted provisional recognition to Kosovo, which declared independence from Serbia in 2008. It will propose full recognition for Kosovo at the IOC general assembly in Monaco in December — which should be a formality.

NHL postpones Sens-Leafs game

Attack on Ottawa.

League, teams respond to act of violence

The NHL postponed Wednesday night's game between the Ottawa Senators and the Toronto Maple Leafs following the shootings on Parliament Hill and at the National War Memorial.

The date and time of the rescheduled game will be announced later, the NHL said in a statement.

A Canadian Forces soldier at the National War Memorial was killed Wednesday morning by a masked gunman, who then moved up the street to launch an attack on nearby Parliament Hill, in which at least two people were injured. The assailant was shot dead inside parliament's Centre Block.

"We obviously respect the league's decision to cancel the game," Maple Leafs general manager Dave Nonis told reporters in Ottawa. "Today's events far outweigh a hockey game. We look forward to coming back and playing the game when they see fit to reschedule it. Our thoughts go out to all the people affected, the police force that you can hear working so hard all day. A hockey game's definitely secondary today."

Senators owner Eugene Melnyk released a statement saying he knows fans stand with the organization to support the league's decision.

"We are shocked and deeply saddened by today's tragic events on Parliament Hill and in downtown Ottawa," Melnyk said in the statement. "Our collective thoughts and prayers are with the families of the victims as well as with all members of

It's the second time in less than two years that the NHL has postponed a game due to a violent incident. In April 2013, the league NHL cancelled a game between the Bruins and Senators after the Boston Marathon bombing. Those teams played the game the day after the regular season ended.

Royal Ronaldo. Liverpool smashed, league-scoring record threatened

Cristiano Ronaldo moved to the brink of the Champions League scoring record by setting Real Madrid on its way to a 3-0 win over Liverpool on Wednesday in the latest show of strength by the free-scoring defending champions.

Madrid handled an early onslaught by the hosts before ripping them apart in a devastating 18-minute spell at the end of the first half, sparked by Ronaldo's sublime flicked finish for his 70th goal in the competition. He is just one goal behind Raul Gonzalez's all-time record and one ahead of great rival Lionel Messi.

Karim Benzema grabbed Madrid's other two goals — in the 30th and 41st minutes — to secure a third straight win for the Spanish side, which tops Group B by six points.

"We are fighting very hard to repeat our success of last season," said Madrid coach Carlo Ancelotti, whose team has won its last eight matches in all competitions by scoring 35 goals. "We are playing well and have a huge desire to make that happen again."

For Liverpool, it was a chastening night that highlighted the gulf in class between two of Europe's grandest clubs who have been European champions 15 times between them.

"It's not something I stand for," Liverpool manager Brendan Rodgers said. "If you want to do that, for me you do that at the end of the game. It's something I'll deal with."

With Ronaldo spearheading the charge with 20 goals from 13 games this season, the Spanish giants again look the team to beat in the Champions League.

The Portuguese star could easily have drawn level or surpassed Raul's record, but was twice denied by Liverpool goalkeeper Simon Mignolet in the second half.

Sabres fans crave 'The Next One'

Race to the bottom. Hopeful fans stitch 'McDavid 97' Sabres jerseys hoping for likely top draft pick in Buffalo

Connor McDavid tries not to read what's written about him, following the advice of agent Bobby Orr and so many people around him. But it's hard after Buffalo Sabres games.

"Whenever the Sabres lose, my Twitter just kind of blows up with fans kind of talking about me and stuff like that," McDavid said.

It goes beyond social media. Some fans have already had "McDavid 97" Sabres jerseys made up and wear them to games that he's not even eligible to play in.

Buffalo is tied for the fewest points in the NHL through six games and has been outshot 227-141. With the team in full rebuild mode and no expectation for success this season, some fans are on board with the idea of tanking for the No. 1 pick in June's draft.

Even with a draft lottery system in place that discourages tanking, former Sabres defenceman and current Erie Otters assistant coach Jay McKee understands why those looking at the long-term picture are willing to cheer for losing to get an opportunity to pick McDavid.

Connor McDavid, an 18-year-old from Newmarket, Ont., has eight goals and 17 assists for 25 points in nine games with the Erie Otters so far this OHL season. COURTESY MATT MEAD/ERIE OTTERS

"They should want to get Connor McDavid, the fans here in Buffalo," McKee said. "But obviously in order to have a chance at drafting Connor, they're probably going to have to have a bad year again.

And as a fan, as a player, that's not necessarily what you want, so it's kind of a double-edged sword."

On Wednesday night, McDavid played his first game at First Niagara Center, which could be his home rink in less than a year. In something of a novelty regular-season Ontario Hockey League game, McDavid and the Otters were in Buffalo to play the Niagara IceDogs.

Standing at a lectern Tuesday afternoon with a Sabres logo on it, McDavid said it was pretty weird to think about fans in Buffalo already getting his name stitched on jerseys. The 17-year-old, considered "The Next One" after Wayne Gretzky and Sidney Crosby, insisted he's not thinking much about the possibility that this is the first of many times he'll step onto the ice here.

"Maybe a little bit," McDavid said. "If Buffalo happens to be the one that drafts me, that'll be great and I'll be thrilled. It's the NHL. You kind of go where you're picked. Every NHL city and organization is first-class. Buffalo would be obviously a tremendous honour."

Poor English led to arrest: Lawyer

Slava Voynov's attorney says the Los Angeles Kings defenceman never hit his girlfriend, and he blames Voynov's arrest on a misunderstanding partly caused by the couple's limited English.

Craig Renetzky is hopeful the NHL will end Voynov's indefinite suspension after reviewing the events that led to Voynov's arrest at a hospital near his home.

Renetzky interviewed Voynov and his girlfriend extensively with help from a Russian interpreter. Without providing specific details, Renetzky said Voynov's girlfriend's injury resulted from "an accident."

"Slava never hit her," Renetzky said. "She was injured, but it's not a result of Slava punching her or anything remotely like that."

Voynov hasn't been charged with a crime by Redondo Beach police, who were scheduled to review the case with the district attorney's office Wednesday. The NHL still suspended Voynov indefinitely with pay on Monday, an action firmly supported by the Kings. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
